Cooking Team Building vs Cooking Class?

So why the confusion?

If it looks like a duck, quacks like a duck, must be a duck, right?

The Chrysler 300 is often mistaken for a Bentley until a Bentley pulls up. Yes, they both get you to your destination, they both have four tires, but that's as far as the similarities go.

Our cooking team buildings are similar to a cooking class in that they both use food. After that, the differences are many. First and most importantly, a culinary team building program is built upon a team building training matrix, meaning it provides challenges to your group that are reflected from your team's training objectives. In simple terms, the focus is on your people, your learning experiences, your team building training take-aways and your ability to bond like a world-class team!

- Fun is our secret weapon to making your team comfortable, lower their emotional walls & open up to new ideas and feelings about the people you work with regularly.
- Food and cooking is a natural common denominator that quickly brings instant rapport and deeper engagement.

- Customized objectives guarantees that your group leaves feeling empowered, entertained and energized toward the direction that you'd like them to go.
- Powerful message and relevant training results incorporates multiple senses that remain anchored within your team.
- Delicious food, made by your hands feed the body and soul!
